

Design: David Chipperfield

Product description

The Tonale tableware, designed by David Chipperfield and presented successfully in 2009, is based on the axioms of the expressive purity of shapes and the variation in tone of colour, bringing personal and refined value to everyday objects.

A versatile collection, enriched in 2018 by a stylish colour variation and several new products: a large bowl, a pitcher, a milk jug and a teacup.

Characteristics / suggested use

- In stoneware, available in black and light grey versions.
- The stoneware ceramic, common to many products in the range, is resistant to high temperatures and thermal shock, for a range which bridges the kitchen and the table.
- Just like in a painting, Tonale offers you the possibility of composing your own table by matching objects and colour tones in an original, elegant manner.

Project text

Inspired by the chromatic intensity of the Japanese lacquers, David Chipperfield combines an original black version with the warm and earthy tones of the original range. The black brings a refined elegance to the pieces which make up the tableware, for a modern yet classy setting.
